LOUIS HOTELS

how long can a

Check - In LAST?

How long can a Check-In last?

Sometimes, much longer than the stay itself.

There are places we visit,
and there are places that somehow stay with us forever.
Places where mornings become memories,
where familiar faces begin to feel like home,
where a view, a scent, a taste, a simple moment can take us back years later.

At Louis Hotels, a check-in is never just an arrival experience or a simple stay.

*It is the beginning of something that grows within.
A feeling of belonging.
A collection of moments shared with the people we love.
A place we return to, not because it is familiar, but because a part of us is already there.*

We may check out.
We may travel home.
Life moves on.
And then, one day, we return.
The surroundings feel familiar, yet somehow the experience feels new again.

Because the most meaningful stays are not measured in nights.

They are measured in memories, in connections,
in the feeling of wanting to come back.

How long can a Check-In last?

Perhaps, if it truly means something, it never really ends.

Timeless Check-In Faces of Belonging

The people behind each welcome shape the feeling of a place over the years.

For years, they have walked the same halls, welcomed countless faces and filled each day with something of their own.

Their stories live here too, in the friendships formed, the moments shared and the guests they have watched return.

They are the familiar smile, the remembered name, the warmth that cannot be scripted.

Because a hotel may be a place.

But it is its people who make it feel like home.

Nick Christophorou,
Front Office Manager
32 YEARS AT LOUIS HOTELS

A STORY WORTH REMEMBERING

Nick has been part of the hotel's story, building friendships and memories along the way.

One memory stands out: replacing a young guest's lost teddy bear and sending it to Wales, a story that later made the local news.

"We made a difference to one little girl, even after she had returned home to Wales".

Skevi Michael,
Executive Housekeeper
23 YEARS AT LOUIS HOTELS

A LIFE SHARED WITH LOUIS HOTELS

Skevi has grown professionally at Louis Hotels while watching her children, and later her grandchildren, grow alongside her. Over the years, her colleagues have become a source of trust and support.

A Christmas Day in 2006 remains especially close to her heart, when the team was treated to a special meal by the chef, turning a busy day into a memorable shared moment.

"I feel grateful to belong here".

Stories of Belonging

Some guests become part of a hotel's story through the moments they share.

They return to familiar faces, favorite corners and the little details that make everything feel known. Over time, stays become stories, moments become memories and a hotel becomes somewhere that holds a special place in their lives.

We asked some of our repeat guests what makes them feel the Louis Hotels sense of belonging.

John & Margaret Holt
13 STAYS

THE FEELING OF BEING AT HOME

Margaret and John return for the smiling faces, the personal touches and the feeling of simply switching off.

"It's home away from home. You walk in and everything else just disappears".

And what makes it special?
Their answer is simple:

"Not one person. They all do".

"Here, I Belong because I can leave the everyday behind and simply enjoy every moment".

Jean & Kenneth Rosser
15 STAYS

A PLACE THEY KEEP COMING BACK TO

Jean and Kenneth are welcomed by people who remember them and make every stay feel personal.

One moment stayed with Jean:

"You're like family to us. We are your family now".

For them, the joy of returning is knowing that feeling goes both ways.

"Here, I Belong because every welcome feels genuine and personal".

Susan Denton
46 STAYS

COUNTLESS MEMORIES

For Susan and her husband, the hotels people they know have made this place a special part of their lives.

For six years, they have celebrated birthdays and anniversaries here, with special touches including a dinner prepared by the Executive Chef.

"Because we come so often, we know everybody. Everyone is special".

"Here, I Belong because it's our second home by the sea and our happy place".

75 Stays! 24 Years!

One place called Home

Most holidaymakers spend years searching for their perfect getaway.

For British traveller Paul Ingledeu, the search ended more than two decades ago at Louis Phaethon Beach in Paphos.

Since his first visit in 2002, Paul has returned an extraordinary 75 times in 24 years. What began as an unexpected trip to Cyprus with his late wife, Christine, soon became a family tradition.

His son married at the hotel in 2005, his daughter followed in 2017, and three grandchildren have since holidayed there.

For Paul, it is the people who make the hotel feel like a second home. Long-standing members of staff know him by sight, remember his favourite drink and welcome him back each time he arrives.

That relationship became particularly meaningful after Christine died suddenly in 2019. Unsure whether he could face returning without her, Paul eventually travelled to the hotel with his son.

“Probably only because it was the Phaethon, I went. And my God, did they look after me”.

Years later, fellow guest Janet recognised Paul from previous holidays. Their friendship developed into companionship, and today they continue returning to Paphos together.

Paul's remarkable loyalty was recently recognised by TUI as part of the launch of the TUI Smiles Rewards Club.

Following a nomination by his long-standing travel agent, Rachel Fletcher, he received a £2,000 holiday voucher and enjoyed a surprise meeting with TV personality Alison Hammond.

Hotel Manager Rudi De Ponte said: “Paul is much more than a guest. He is part of the Louis Phaethon family. We've celebrated weddings, welcomed new generations of his family and shared many important moments over the years”.

Known affectionately by fellow guests as “Zumba Man”, Paul has no plans to break with tradition.

“I'll be booking my 76th trip with it soon”!

After 75 stays and more than two decades of memories, Louis Phaethon Beach has truly become Paul's home away from home!
